BREAD & ROSES

PRESENTS™

Bread & Roses is dedicated to uplifting the human spirit by providing free, live, quality entertainment to people who live in institutions or are otherwise isolated from society.

Founded in 1974 by Mimi Fariña, a musician who understood the healing power of live music and the performing arts for those facing challenging times while living apart from family and friends. The Bread & Roses organization is now a steadfast Bay Area nonprofit in its fifth decade! More than 300 performers, program hosts, and other volunteers help over 500 shows go on each year for more than 90,000 audience members.

Their performances aim to enrich the soul and promote wellness through the healing power of the performing arts. They also create a sense of community for professional performers, in a non-commercial setting, in which they can donate their talents to inspire and be inspired.

Many notable artists have generously donated their time and talents to Bread & Roses over the years, performing at benefit events and concerts, such as: Joan Baez, Boy Genius, Judy Collins, Fantastic Negrito, Jerry Garcia, Wavy Gravy, Mickey Hart, Hozier, Kris Kristofferson, Bonnie Raitt, Nathaniel Rateliff, Pete Seeger, and Robin Williams.

The concerts bring joy to children undergoing chemotherapy, teens battling substance abuse, families in homeless shelters, veterans recovering from trauma, seniors in hospice, and others facing challenging times alone. They brighten the lives of people living in hospitals, recovery centers, mental institutions, food banks, special needs schools, shelters, and more. They produce free, live music and entertainment for Bay Area children, teens, adults, and elders who don't have the ability to easily experience the uplifting power of the arts in any other way.

"Thank you United Markets for your leadership in supporting Bread & Roses, as well as the broader nonprofit community, which makes all the difference in fulfilling our mission."
