American Heart Association NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

The American Heart Association believes every person deserves the opportunity for a full and healthy life. That is why they are committed to championing health equity and advancing cardiovascular health for all. They are a relentless force for a world of longer, healthier lives.

For 100 years, the American Heart Association has been fighting heart disease and stroke and helping families and communities thrive.

American Heart Association knows we will only beat heart disease and stroke if we work together. They advocate for policies that prevent cardiovascular diseases, improve the quality of and access to care, increase research funding and expand rehabilitation services.

Their impact is felt locally! From funding scientific cardiovascular focused Covid-19 research at local institutions to advocating for public health policies that protect our young people from the harms of tobacco, they are working hard to save lives. They are here to serve the Greater Bay Area.
